CAMPSITE

The team is not going to make it back to base in time tonight. You will have to set up camp now. It is already getting dark—so dark that half of your team members already cannot see...

The object of this activity is to erect an entire army campsite. The team breaks into smaller groups. Half of the members of each group are blindfolded. Only those blind folded are allowed to touch the equipment. Those not blindfolded must communicate clearly and effectively and guide teammates to successfully erect the campsite.

This activity is designed to promote listening and communication skills while encouraging trust amongst members. Forward planning and briefing is essential.
